

A Professional Services Platform that Maximizes Revenue – Intapp Conflicts with Dun & Bradstreet Insights

Unified workflows, a modern interface and the right context for decision-making with trusted Dun & Bradstreet business information

INTAPP CONFLICTS

Intapp Conflicts is a professional services platform that enables organizations to thrive in a competitive marketplace by delivering operational efficiency, maximizing revenue, and driving client success. The platform integrates data to enable broader client evaluation — including information from Dun & Bradstreet, as well as critical historical data from internal applications — so decision-makers have better context to make informed business decisions.

CORPORATE FAMILIES, RELATIONSHIPS, AND DUE DILIGENCE

One important component of making business acceptance decisions is understanding the relationships between current and future clients. Referred to broadly as a “corporate family,” this describes the branches, divisions, and subsidiary companies that are owned and managed by a single business entity, as well as its parent. For firms, understanding the relationships between customers, vendors, and other business partners can prevent conflicts of interest. For 180 years, Dun & Bradstreet has helped companies navigate corporate organizations, build the right business relationships, and better understand their clients.

Intapp Conflicts is integrated with Dun & Bradstreet’s trusted business information, enabling users to research and document the relationships between potential and existing clients. D&B maintains detailed records of the relationships across members of the same corporate family, all interconnected with the D-U-N-S Number®.
